MENTAL DISEASES AND ORAL HYGIENE

Along with Other Topics Make Up the Day's Program at the Conference.

(BY ASSOCIATED PRESS) INDIANAPOLIS, May 16.—Such diversified subjects as oral hygiene,

Why Suffer From Migraine or Sick Headache?

Dr. J. J. Caldwell says that this exceedingly distressing disease does not shorten life, but does not appear to be curable. Sufferers from this affliction are condemned to undergo the periodical attacks every few weeks until they are forty years of age, after which the attacks are less frequent, and finally disappear entirely. Palliative measures during the attack are all that it is possible to suggest, while care in the diet is the best preventive measure. An attack may often be prevented by taking two anti-kamnia tablets when the first symptoms appear, and one anti-kamnia tablet every two hours during the attack shortens it, eases the pain and brings rest and quiet. Anti-kamnia tablets may be obtained at all druggists. Ask for A-K Tablets. They quickly relieve all Pain.

business depression and mental diseases made up the program of the National Conference of Charities and Correction at today's session.

Dr. Frederick R. Henshaw, dean of the Indianapolis Dental College, Indianapolis, exhibited a number of actual cases of bad care of the teeth and mouth and spoke of the social effects of this condition. He made a report of the result obtained in the Children's Clinic, which has been maintained for the past year in the Indiana Dental college by the Indianapolis board of health. This report contained data showing the character and amount of work done, the effects upon the bodily condition on the children and the effects as nearly as may be determined upon their work in school. He gave complete data upon this matter and also general case reports of the effect of the removal of dental diseases from the mouth upon the general systemic conditions.

Labor Reserve Board. "Labor's Federal Reserve Board," was discussed in a paper by William M. Leiserson, professor of political and social science, Toledo university. "Not until we have a national labor reserve board will we make any real headway in dealing with irregularity of employment," said Mr. Leiserson. "The problem of unemployment is not to be solved by discussion. What we need now is government action, experimentation and administrative experience. When President Wilson outlined his program of 'The New Freedom' he saw at once the need of a money reserve board. He insisted that the small business man's demand for credit must be met, that the control of the eastern bankers must be broken and the financial resources of the country centered in government controlled reserve banks to meet the fluctuating demands of industry and agriculture. But jobs for the workers are no less important than finances for farmers and business men. If the new freedom means freedom for the wage-earner as well as for the business man then we must not stop with a financial board. We must have a labor reserve board to help the worker get the job that he needs, to free him from the exploitation of the private labor agent and to mobilize and control the work of the country in the interest of the wage-earner.

"A bill creating such a board might well outline the main features of the commission's work. Enough studies have been made in this country and enough experiments have been tried in Europe to show what those outlines should be.

Labor Exchange Division. "The board should have a labor exchange division to create a national system of labor exchanges out of the existing agencies and to stimulate the states and cities to improve and extend their bureaus under the direction of the federal board.

"Another division should study and devise methods of using public work to regularize the labor market by absorbing workers released from private employment, during slack periods and releasing him to private industry in busy times.

"Another part of the labor reserve board's work is to collect and furnish information regarding opportunities for self-employment in the United States,—particularly on the land.

"The board should prevent trades and industries from becoming overcrowded with workers or over-supplied with laborers, by showing the industries and localities which are growing and in need of labor and warning workers against the trades and places which are over-supplied with labor and where unemployment is most prevalent."

Government Ownership. John R. Shillady, secretary of the Mayor's Committee on Unemployment of New York City, proposed that public improvements and, where practicable, the purchases of federal, state and municipal governments and the permanent improvements of railroads (so far as the railroads would do so) be used to prevent wide-spread unemployment in times of commercial depression. Mr. Shillady cited authorities in the United States and abroad who favored this method of counteracting the distress that occurs when in times of depression private employers lay off large numbers of men.

Mr. Shillady said that the federal, state, city and municipal governments expended in 1913, $586,000,000 on the acquisition or construction of more or less permanent properties and public improvements of all kinds. This was ten and a half per cent of the total governmental expenditures. In the same year, the railroads spent on roads, rolling stock, machinery, repair shops, etc., $680,000,000. If only one-half of the expenditures in 1913 by these government departments were taken as an average for the ten years, the total expenditures of the various governmental bodies and the railroads for these purposes would amount to approximately $633,000,000.

Mr. Shillady said that if ten per cent on the average of the latter figure (which would be only one per cent of the total governmental expenditures for all purposes) were laid aside each year of normal business conditions, to be utilized as a reserve fund for use during times of commercial crisis there would be a sufficient fund of $285,000,000 in this reserve to employ one-tenth of the total working population employed in trade, transportation, manufacturing and mechanical pursuits for a period of twelve weeks, at a wage equal for all classes of labor and for all ages to the average weekly earnings of the wage-earners of the country as shown by best available information. Brain Institute Needed.

Dr. Owen Copp, superintendent of the Pennsylvania hospital, West Philadelphia, Pa., who formerly had the direction of the entire system of care of the insane in the state of Massachusetts told the conference there was great need of a brain institute for research into the nature, cause, results, prevention and treatment of mental diseases and mental defect established on a foundation as broad and comprehensive as the Rockefeller institute for medical research in general.

"The imperative need of effective national supervision of immigration is obvious," he said. "In order that embarkation at foreign ports of the insane, feeble-minded, epileptic, degenerate, and others likely to become public charges, may be prevented, that exclusion of such may be effectual at United States ports of entry through mental examination on ship-board or before admission, by trained psychiatrists in the United States Marine Hospital Service; that detection of unlawful admission of such immigrants may be assured and deportation to their homes effected under humane conditions."
